

Brownie Troop 2896 Notes

January 17, 2007

In case you forgot...it's COOKIE TIME! Girls should be out selling cookies in this "pre-order" period, which ends next week. Please make sure you get your initial orders to Liz Mullany by next Wednesday morning so she can send them in. You can continue to take orders, but they will not count towards the initial "high stepper" patch that girls can get for selling 150 boxes before booth sales.

We did earn a try-it last year for cookies, but we covered the activities for a different cookie try-it (Smart Cookie) today. This try-it is more focused on the business behind selling cookies—making a plan to contact people and keeping track of them, knowing your product, setting goals—stuff like that. They have a "cookie portfolio" that they are bringing home to help manage their cookie stuff. They also will earn another cookie activity pin (the diamond shaped thing that goes on the front of the vest) by the time booth sales are underway.

We also worked on thank you notes for our hosts from AMC Theatres and the Embassy of India. And we are exchanging postcards with some other troops throughout the USA and the world in preparation for Thinking Day (March 2) and the Brownie Girl Scouts Around the World try-it, so we worked on the text for those postcards. We already completed the "Write Away" try-it, but these activities will also count towards that.

Finally, depending on what the girls want to do, we may have an extra session sometime within the next week to work on several art contests. If the girls decide they want to do that, you will get an email soon (would most likely be on Sunday).

Next meeting: January 31 (Wednesday)
