

Brownie Troop 2896 Notes

January 31, 2007

We started work on Thinking Day today. We reviewed what we learned at the Embassy and talked about our display and swaps for the celebration on March 2. Each girl is being asked to look up a picture on the Internet and print it out for our display; I'll send an email out with assignments to help them remember. At our next meeting, Omisha's mom (Raj) is coming to help us learn more about India.

Don't forget that girls can continue taking orders for cookies all the way through booth sales. We will get our booth sale assignments on Thursday, February 8; each girl should do at least one booth sale.

We received some postcards back from some troops that we sent postcards to after the last meeting. It's interesting to hear what other troops are doing. We are waiting for 3 or 4 more to come back, mostly the ones from foreign countries.

Our troop has been accepted into a sing-a-long session to learn songs for the big June Girl Scout Sing-A-Long at the Mall. The date is Friday evening, April 13—please mark your calendars.

If anyone still wants to work on the River of Words contest, please get me their entries by next Friday, February 9.
