

Brownie Troop 2896 Notes

November 29, 2006

Great job on the calendar sales! We sold 32 calendars and took in a decent amount of donations, so we were able to offset a significant amount of the cost of this upcoming weekend's Junie B. Jones performance with the booth sale. Thanks again to Julie B. for organizing everything.

Please try to be at Imagination Stage 20 – 30 minutes in advance of the 3:30pm showtime on Saturday. We do have seat assignments, and the tickets will be distributed once we get there.

Today was our Charlotte's Web meeting. Since they just finished studying insects, we went over the body parts of a spider to see how they are different from an insect. We also did a "Mad Libs" type of activity related to the story. There is a word search and some Charlotte's Web tattoos that are going home in the packing today. The movie is being released mid-December, but since there is so much going on already in December, we won't make plans to see the movie as a troop until January.

The biggest activity was one that we tied into the idea of Charlotte being both a good writer and a good friend. We got incredibly lucky with timing, and just got the names of another Brownie troop in New Hampshire for which we will be pen pals. So, we wrote letters to our new pen pals. This completes the "Write Away" try-it requirements.

Next meeting: December 6 (Wednesday—NEXT WEEK)

Holiday book exchange: Bring a wrapped "just right" book!
