

MILITARY WRITERS SOCIETY OF AMERICA

September 27, 2006

Carlo Bondoc,

Thank you for your interest in joining Military Writers Society of America (MWSA).

We are an association of more than five-hundred authors, poets, and artists, drawn together by the common bond of military service. Most of our members are active duty military, retirees, or military veterans. A few are lifelong civilians who have chosen to honor our military through their writings or their art. Our only core principle is a love of the men and women who defend this nation, and a deeply personal understanding of their sacrifice and dedication.

The Military Writers Society of America is the brainchild of our Founder and President, W. H. (Bill) McDonald Jr. Like most who encounter the moral extremes of combat, Bill discovered that war is a crucible of spiritual transformation. It is, quite simply, impossible to live through that sort of experience and not be changed by it. To better understand his own experiences, Bill began to write about them.

In the years since, he has discovered literally hundreds of other warriors who are driven to explore and reveal their experiences through fiction, non-fiction, poetry and art. It was Bill's vision to bring them together to share and promote their respective arts.

The Military Writers Society of America is that vision brought to life.

We would be honored to welcome you into our membership. There are no dues or membership fees. We feel that in serving our country – you have already paid your dues.

Please stop by and visit our website at www.militarywriters.com. I would invite you to send in any suggestions you may have. If you will inform us of your book signings and speaking engagements and we will post them to the events page.

Please direct those notices directly to me at jedward1@san.rr.com.

Again, please let me welcome you to the Military Writer's Society of America.

Won't you take a brief moment and share how you learned of the MWSA?

Congratulations!

*Maria Edwards
Membership Secretary
jedward1@san.rr.com*

cc: WHM