

Quick Write..

Take 10 minutes to respond to the following...

- What sorts of things count as emotions?
Are emotions and feelings the same thing?

- Is it possible to experience an emotion, a feeling, an attitude or sensibility that cannot be expressed in language?
Can an emotion, such as love or grief, have its origins in, or be shaped by, language?

Oct 23-8:53 AM

TOK VOCAB PART II

Concrete-	Relating to an actual, specific thing or instance
Empirical -	Verifiable or provable by means of observation or experiment
Objective -	based on facts; unbiased
Subjective -	Particular to a given person; personal
Rudimentary -	basic facts or principles; elementary
Fundamental -	an essential part of, a foundation or basis
Subtle -	So slight as to be difficult to detect or describe
Flagrant -	shockingly noticeable or evident
Blatant -	without any attempt at concealment; completely obvious
Implicit -	implied, rather than expressly stated
Explicit -	directly stated
<hr/>
Subliminal -	Below the threshold of conscious perception
Arcane -	known or understood by very few; obscure
Esoteric -	private; secret; confidential
Erudite -	characterized by great knowledge
Covert -	concealed; secret; disguised
<hr/>
Credible -	capable of being believed; believable
Susceptible -	Easily influenced or affected
Naïve -	Lacking worldly experience and understanding
Gullible -	easily swayed or convinced
Skeptical -	showing doubt
<hr/>
Judicious -	having sound judgment
Compelling -	to have a powerful and irresistible effect
Discerning -	To perceive or recognize as being different or distinct

Oct 23-9:16 AM

TOK ESSAY 2:

How do beliefs about the world, and beliefs about what is valuable, influence the pursuit of knowledge?

Consider the meaning of “justification” in different areas of knowledge. Is any one kind of justification more compelling than any other?

Nov 5-12:49 PM