

Introduction...

Okay, as you can see, this section of the web site is done up, with the exception of the menu page, in Adobe PDF format. Some documents have a higher security setting than others. You'll have to use your browser's back button to find your way back to the main page of this section.

I love Adobe software by the way, and Acrobat allows you to maintain your documents as you would like others to see them; you're not a slave to what somebody's web browser allows them to see. All PDF pages were composed in Acrobat 6.0 and should be compatible with Acrobat Reader 3.0 and above.

On to the writing...

Heather Marie is a poem that I wrote about ten years ago. Yes, she's a real person. We haven't spoken to one another for a very long time, but the poem that I wrote for her is, I believe, the best thing that I've ever written; so I still keep publishing it to the web when ever I have the web space to do it. It's something that I'm very proud of.

The Wrong Way is a short story that I wrote like six years back. I have no major connection to it, really. I used to, it was something that I was very proud of when I first wrote it, but over the years it's lost some of its luster.

I may post more original written works. I guess it depends on how people react to what's here now, and when I can get the time to convert Microsoft Word files to Acrobat for the web.

I wasn't planning on using this web site as an e-book or anything; actually, I don't really know why I want to publish any written work on the web at all. Something just compels me to do it. All in all, these two little works are a fair snapshot of my writing. I hope that you take the time to read them. I hope that they're something that you enjoy.

I'd love to hear your questions or comments, you can write to me at ultravortek@verizon.net.
